We invite contributors to propose any cases of regions in transition that fit. A key research question is to understand which aspects of usability and security will have matching results when studied in VR and in the real world. This sort of institutional constellation will then be confronted with the more material, persistent and structural properties of regions the role of property, political fragmentation, shadow coalitions, urban perforation, infrastructure that may still be at work and which are likely to block change, create inertia and undermine open discourse.

Thus, one strategic and one spatial level of consideration always exist. Bar complexity of these challenges requires an integrated and transdisciplinary approach that allows for diverse, inclusive and multi-scalar strategies. Which body or institution can therefore plan and implement at the city-region scale?
