Our modern teen novels, always presenting a passionate love story between a shy and innocent girl and a bad boy who wears a leather jacket and is a vampire, a werewolf or a fallen angel can be entertaining enough for a quick read, but they completely lack any further message to the readers. I could not get through it, Little Women: From the Original Publisher I should have persevered but Joe dreaming of Laurie's manly chest hair was too reminiscent of the godawful 50 Shades of Grey. I thought that was completely bizarre.
