Evoked from the past but coincident with bombs, fire, screaming, and destruction, the barely audible masterpiece suggests at best a certain impotence, an inability to help or

matter, and, at worst, a complicity with the more destructive aspects of western progress. The other four parts were datamined. The struggle is relentless, and the world bristles with points of swords, each of which hungers for my heart. For, like a desert beast, with boiling blood, which once more rises, transforms
